Public Health and ‘Witchcraft’ Beliefs: An Overview

Presentation by Gary Foxcroft, Executive Director, Witchcraft and Human Rights Information Network (WHRIN)
Organisational Background

WHRIN is a small NGO working to promote awareness and understanding of human rights violations that are committed around the world due to the beliefs in witchcraft, spirit possession, magic and human sacrifice.

The WHRIN network is made up of over 1,000 activists, academics, practitioners, policy makers and survivors of abuse.

Our vision is of a world where all people can live freely without fear of their rights being abused due to these harmful beliefs and practices.
Working to Develop Solutions to Human Rights Abuses Linked to Beliefs in Witchcraft

• Since 2012 WHRIN has been working to raise awareness and understanding of these issues. Our work is increasingly focused on developing solutions to prevent further abuses.

• 2018 Report of the Independent Expert on the enjoyment of human rights by persons with albinism on the expert workshop on witchcraft and human rights stated that:

“Witchcraft is a deeply rooted reality, engrained in societies that serve as a system of explanation as well as of exploitation of misfortune. It is fuelled by misbeliefs in supernatural powers and misconceptions of public health issues”.
Working to Develop Solutions to Human Rights Abuses Linked to Beliefs in Witchcraft

Recommendations from the report highlighted the need to:

• Improve primary health care and health education about disease to reduce the belief in witchcraft as a cause of illness;

• Carry out multi-stakeholder campaigns to dismantle myths that promote witchcraft-related harm;

• Address the beliefs and motivation behind witchcraft accusations and ritual attacks;

• Carry out education and awareness campaigns, including health awareness.
The Link Between Public Health and ‘Witchcraft’ Beliefs

- Most cases WHRIN have documented are linked to a prevailing public health condition
- They are also located in places where access to health services remains very low
- The trigger for abuses is often a community member becoming ill or dying. The wider family and community members then often blame a vulnerable member of the community for this misfortune and accuse them of being a witch and therefore causing the illness or death.
- People who are suffering from public health conditions themselves are also particularly vulnerable to witchcraft accusations and ritual attacks.
What do We Mean by ‘Witchcraft’ Beliefs?

• What is witchcraft? There is no universally accepted definition of witchcraft and the term means different things to different people in different places. Primarily witchcraft can be seen as a negative, malevolent force which is used by people – witches – in the spirit realm to bring about harm in the physical realm. It is the art of doing evil.

• The central questions that beliefs in witchcraft provide an answers for are “Why me?”, “Why now?” and “Who is to blame?” Such questions are likely to arise no matter how the disease is interpreted. Put simply, all illnesses are believed to have a spiritual dimension.
What do We Mean by ‘Witchcraft’ Beliefs?

- Spirit possession is the supposed control of a human body by spirits, demons or gods. The concept of spirit possession exists in most religions.

- Perceived Magical Powers of Certain Body Parts – Most especially related to the killings of persons with albinism due to belief their body parts hold magical powers.

- Family Curses – These are believed to be reoccurring problems that steal, kill, and destroy, such as sickness.

- Evil eye - The evil eye is a curse believed to be cast by a malevolent glare, usually given to a person when he/she is unaware. Many cultures believe that receiving the evil eye will cause misfortune or injury.

Recent study, which was published online Oct. 30 in the Royal Society journal highlighted that, in places where infectious diseases were historically widespread, "people were more likely to believe in the devil, the malevolent power of the evil eye and in witches who channel evil".

Witchcraft and Public Health Epidemics - Ebola

NGO worker, Sierra Leone - “The impact of beliefs on witchcraft on both the medical and community education is immense. We work in communities highly affected who just fail to respond to key messages on staying safe and attribute family members dying to witchcraft, children surviving to them be witches you name it. I was in a village where a corpse was dug out of the grave, because a few of the elders felt they were haunted by the dead man's spirit for not giving him a full traditional burial. The whole community then took part in the washing of the corpse... the result is they are dying like flies, getting very sick and still attribute this to the curse of the dead man. I have never seen burial teams and ambulances so active, all because of the belief in witchcraft.”.

- There also exists the belief that the health professionals are witches who aim to use parts of their victims’ corpses in powerful sorcery.
- In some areas the hostility against medical teams has resulted, not merely in riots, but in their being chased away by a weapon-wielding mob.
- In 2019 in DRC two facilities of Medicins Sans Frontieres was burned down due to local beliefs in witchcraft.
Witchcraft and Public Health Epidemics – HIV/AIDS

• Widely documented that belief in magic and witchcraft contributes to misconceptions and the spread of HIV in Africa.

• Symptoms of AIDS - diarrhea, tuberculosis, and wasting are the classic symptoms of poisoning through witchcraft.

• Many believe that HIV may have spiritual causes, notably witchcraft attacks or loss of protection from ancestors through violating cultural taboos.

• Widows in some parts of Africa are expected to engage in unprotected sex in order to "cleanse" them. The belief is that the husband's spirit will return otherwise, cursing the family.

• As Adam Ashforth observes, ‘a disease or complex of symptoms better suited to interpretation within the witchcraft paradigm than AIDS would be hard to imagine.'
Witchcraft and Public Health Pandemics – Covid-19

- Throughout history and all around the world, beliefs in witchcraft intensify during times of general social anxiety

- Covid-19 is expected to lead to a significant rise in cases of harmful practices linked to accusations of witchcraft and ritual attacks

- This will likely be the result of the mystification of the virus; lack of medical understanding of the virus and symptoms; and through the actions of community leaders professing alternative cures

- In Africa the social and economic impact of the lockdown itself is likely to have a far greater impact than the virus itself

- India: Hindu priest beheads man in human sacrifice at Indian temple in a bid to end coronavirus

- Haiti: Girl dies after witch doctor gives her turtle blood to drink as ‘coronavirus cure’

- Kenya: Miji Kenda elders, conducted traditional rituals in the community’s sacred forest, cursing the "COVID-19 evil spirit."

- Kenya: DARK FORCES - Matuga residents say witchcraft killing business - They say sorcerers have intensified their work in the area and ruined the local economy.

- Africa: People with albinism are being blamed for the spread of the coronavirus in Africa because of their ‘whiteness’

- Tanzania: President John Magufuli has been singled out as an outlier in the fight against COVID-19. He was quoted saying God, not masks, is the answer to fighting the pandemic.
The Role of Witchdoctors and Traditional Healers

• Lack of access to public health facilities and spiritual beliefs drive those in need to witchdoctors and traditional healers

• Many witchdoctors and traditional healers claim to be able to cure various illnesses

• In Sierra Leone for example there are two psychiatrists and around 45,000 witchdoctors

• They are both a key part of the problem and the solution
Traditional healer David Conteh mixes pastes and tinctures out of powders, roots and leaves to drive away evil spirits, he says.
The Role of Faith Leaders

• Those with sickness are often taken to faith leaders to cure the illness, which is seen as having a spiritual source.

• Exorcism is a key tool used by faith leaders to drive out the devil or evil spirits.

• This is often commercialised, with those affected paying large fees for ‘treatment’.

• Faith leaders are a significant part of the solution to combating these practices.

In this booklet, Dr Patricia Lund of Coventry University (p.lund@coventry.ac.uk) shares her experiences of working with people in Zimbabwe, South Africa, Malawi, Zambia and Ghana by answering questions she has been asked over the past 20 years.

Thanks are due to the many people who have contributed, including families with albinism, teachers, health care professionals, education officials, development workers and academic colleagues.

Development of this booklet was supported by Coventry University (UK), The Commonwealth Secretariat and SightSavers.

Special thanks to the families living with albinism and members of the albinism associations in both Zambia and Malawi, for their support and ideas.

For three years, Standing Voice has supported a talented collective of advocates and performers from across Tanzania in their mission to demystify albinism through interactive theatre. In a captivating display of creativity and courage, the Hadithi Storytelling and Performance Group harnesses the power of song, dance and participatory drama to dispel popular myths and spark community dialogue around albinism.
Demystification of public health conditions is clearly a significant part of the solution to prevent further human rights abuses linked to beliefs in ‘witchcraft’

A response will need to:

✓ Acknowledge the reality of the beliefs
✓ Include voices and perspectives from communities, public health workers, faith leaders, witchdoctors and traditional healers
✓ Be adaptable to different cultures and beliefs
✓ Be simple, cost effective and scalable
Thank You!
